

Apple Developer Connection Student Program

The Apple Developer Connection is the primary developer source for critical information regarding Apple platforms and technologies. Created specifically for university students around the world, the ADC Student Program offers a low-cost way for students to gain access to many resources Apple provides to professional developers, including a generous hardware discount (one system per student). The program is ideal for students who are just beginning to explore programming on the Mac or considering a development career.

Through the ADC Student Program, you'll get access to some of the best Mac development tools around, including a full version of Metrowerks' CodeWarrior Academic for Java. Other student program benefits include Mac OS X system software and Mac OS X Developer Tools on CD-ROM. In addition, we help connect students with networking opportunities through Apple-sponsored job fairs and other events. Each year students may enter the WWDC scholarship program to qualify for free passes to Apple's annual Worldwide Developers Conference. But the best news of all is the price—Student Program membership costs just US$99 per year and gift memberships are available.

Membership Benefits

Software

Student Orientation Kit

Includes latest localized versions of the Mac OS and hardware discount information.

Other Software

Students receive up-to-date Mac OS system software upon commercial release. In addition, members qualify for discounts on QuickTime API development kits, Mac OS X Server, WebObjects, and other Apple software as available. Development kits for most Apple hardware and software technologies are available free of charge. Tool samplers are provided periodically from third parties.

Training and Events

Worldwide Developers Conference

Discounts and scholarships are available for the annual "must attend" conference for Apple developers around the world. Student developer attendees participate in special orientation and events as well as all regular sessions and events.

Additional Student Resources

Student Community

Chat with over one thousand other student developers around the world on our email lists. You can exchange ideas and work on projects with people who love the Mac as much as you do. When your project is complete, send us your work to be considered for inclusion in our Student Showcase.

ADC News

Weekly email broadcast with the latest developer-related news and information. Quarterly student-specific email newsletters.

ADC Web Site

Thousand of web pages including developer news and technical, business, and marketing reference materials and resources, as well as megabytes of sample code to help you write your own applications. The student web site provides links to introductory materials, tutorials, job opportunities, and student-specific news.

<http://developer.apple.com/students/>.

Monthly Mailings with Developer CD Series

Relevant information, special offers, software SDKs and DDKs, tools, technical documentation, and reference material on CD delivered to your door. Material includes student specific CD sets with up-to-date technical and marketing information, as well as information on negotiated ADC Member Discount programs for students.

Enroll today! Visit the ADC Member Site at <http://connect.apple.com> to start creating the next generation of Macintosh software and hardware products.